

In 1954 Maurice Angelin's son, Alfred, and his wife Rosa took over the business. They converted an outhouse next to their newly-built home to set up a grocery store. Alfred, like his father before him worked on the land. He would deal with the orders and supplies in the evening and Rosa served the customers. Tired of running the shop, their daughter Claudine took over in 1998.

Rosa Luisier (1929-2013) and Alfred Luisier (1925-2006) in their shop in 1980.